Volume 2 : September 2003

Amateur Radio is a unique, fascinating and friendly hobby which captivates the interest and enjoyment of millions of people, from all walks of life, around the world.

One of its great benefits is the huge range of activities, from people communicating via radio, people communicating via the Internet, people with interests including Weather Satellites, Short Wave Listening, Radio Astronomy, Meteor Scatter, Meteorology and Propagation, right up to those talking to the International Space Station using the latest digital technology.

Radio Amateurs are working from the cutting edge of radio communications technology through to those whom gain much enjoyment from older radios and building the 'electronic birds nest'.

Amateur Radio is essentially a hobby which is fun for everyone.

With the advances of the Internet Connection speeds and '24/7' connections, largely though Broadband (ADSL), connecting an Amateur Radio Transceiver to the internet, is now a reality. The Internet Gateway is this new and increasingly popular 'mode' of operation.

This new 'mode' of operation, allows many users, such as those whom do not have the luxury of outside antennas or those whom live in built up cities, to communicate with other fellow Amateurs around the world using both radio and computers.

It also has proven to rekindle interest from older Radio Amateurs and spark valued enthusiasm for new blood within the hobby.

Welcome to this bumper 2nd Edition of the Amateur Radio Internet Gateway Directory and Callbook 2003. This publication has been produced to assist both RF and PC based Amateur Radio Stations to quickly look up and reference contacts and now contains over 56,000 stations!

The directory and callbook is a culmination of merging and manipulating a number of different databases, tables, web pages and information published elsewhere on the internet and within the Internet Gateway Software listings.

Any text or descriptions given are those which accompanied the callsign at the time of publication and no responsibility can be assumed for accuracy and for any location information text posted at that time of data collection. All details provided are done so in good faith and for reference only. Some EchoLink node numbers are subject to change if users, repeaters and links 'upgrade' to the 'Vanity Node Numbers' scheme.

It is hoped that you find this new edition of interest and are able to put it to good use. The important thing is to enjoy the amateur radio hobby, keep in contact with existing friends and through the use of this Internet technology, make many new ones.

Finally, the Internet Gateway's are connected to many Ham Repeaters/Links Worldwide, most of which are run voluntarily. Please remember to support your local repeater group as your contributions help maintain these valuable stations and access to the world.

The Hitch Hikers Guide to the Amatear Radio Internet Gateway

'Amateur radio is all about 'communications' and by embracing a little of today's technology, a new dimension or 'mode of operation' has been added to this interesting and fascinating hobby. Welcome to the world of the Amateur Radio Internet Gateway'

'Hey look Ernie, see this magazine headline, I guess us radio hams are about to mod our radios for the next generation in communications' said Dick as he munched his cheese and pickle sandwiches. 'So what this new mode of operation?' he continued.

Ernie put his soldering iron down and turned around to look over at the magazine article. 'Oh' he replied. 'Well, that is a culmination of traditional analogue audio, digital audio, PC/RF Interface and the Internet, all held together with a piece of software. It's quite interesting actually'.

So does it mean my radio is now defunct? "No!!" replied Ernie with a smile. 'In fact, using your radio in connection with the RF Linking station or repeater, enables you to talk to even more hams and in many cases, it is also notably revitalising areas within our hobby as we know it'

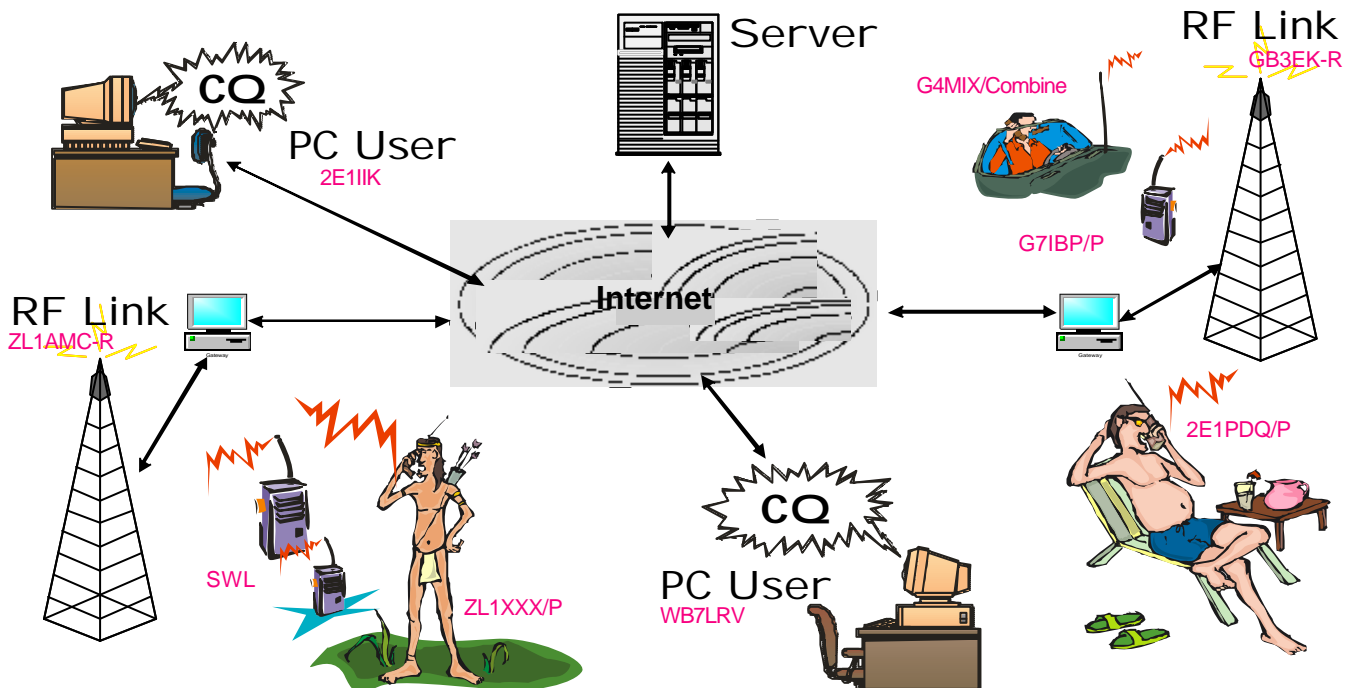

Linked'. 'Is that GB3EK?' Dick asked, 'Yes' said Ernie. 'If you wish Dick, you are more than welcome to borrow my portable for the weekend and have a listen' 'Hey thanks Ernie, I will take you up on that if OK.

Ernie turned round and shuffled though the resistor drawer for the required value component then with a small stretch, carried on with the repair. Dick on the other hand now had his mind on Internet Linking decided to finish the remainder of this lunch break reading the article....

The 'additional' mode in communications.

By making use of the Internet and VoIP (which stands for Voice over Internet Protocol), it is possible to connect radio transceivers together anywhere in the world. It is also possible to use a normal PC to connect via some software, to other radio transceivers, and other PC's.

(Below diagram shows a typical example of an Echolink or eQSO Internet Gateway Conversation or Net)

Dick, now finishing his lunch and expressing interest in this, walked over to Ernie. 'I can see some mileage in this' said Dick, 'but what do I need to do to my radio to talk via the Internet?'

'You need to do nothing with your radio, other than maybe get hold of a DTMF Mic which will allow you to make and break calls to other Internet linked stations, but even this is not mandatory' replied Ernie. 'In fact, the 70cm repeater over in sunny Margate is 'Internet

An Internet Gateway is a:

- Connection of an Amateur Radio Transceiver to PC Computer
- Connection of a PC Computer to the Internet
- Providing a connection of a Radio Transceiver to the Internet

The possible combinations of an Internet Gateway station are:

RF to RF, RF to PC, PC to RF and PC to PC

For this reason, its flexibility has enabled this new mode to gain much interest from both RF and non RF users due to the following benefits:

- Ability to operate an Amateur Radio station without any aerials. E.g. Flats, Retirement homes, built up areas.
- Ability to communicate over longer distances via VHF and UHF Radio. Therefore not limited to local QSO's.
- Ability to operate an Amateur Radio station using just a PC Computer.
- Combines 'two' great hobbies of Computers and Amateur Radio Communications.

So how does the system work? Well the audio signal is converted into 'digital packets' at the transmitting end and sent over the internet. The 'digital packets' are

- Computer Station – Any Valid Amateur Radio Licence
- RF Link Station – Any Valid Amateur Radio Licence
- RF Link RF Host – Any Valid Amateur Radio Licence +

(+ N.B. No UK Foundation Licensee may run a RF Host / Server Station)

Further UK licencing details at www.dcc.rsgb.org

Internet Gateway Servers are dotted around the globe. These provide a level of Callsign Authentication / validation and system etiquette, depending on the software system used as described below.

Software

Despite the recent take-up of interest within the last year, the Internet Gateway and VoIP has been in use and developed over a longer period of time. In fact it goes back to the early 90's when a system was used which was based on IPhone (Internet Phone).

then reassembled at the receiving end and turned back into an audio signal.

The device which provides this analogue and digital conversion is called a CODEC. Short for COMPRESSOR / DECOMPRESSOR, a codec is any 'technology' for compressing and decompressing data. Codec's can be implemented in software, hardware, or a combination of both. Some popular codec's for computers and other everyday life include MPEG and MP3.

Due to the way the data is moved around the internet, an inherent Propagational delay is instilled within the transmission 'over'. Despite this and other small delays such as VOX (Voice Operated PTT) on some links and repeaters, the system works very well.

Licence Requirements and control.

In order to operate and use an Internet Gateway, you must meet the following basic conditions:

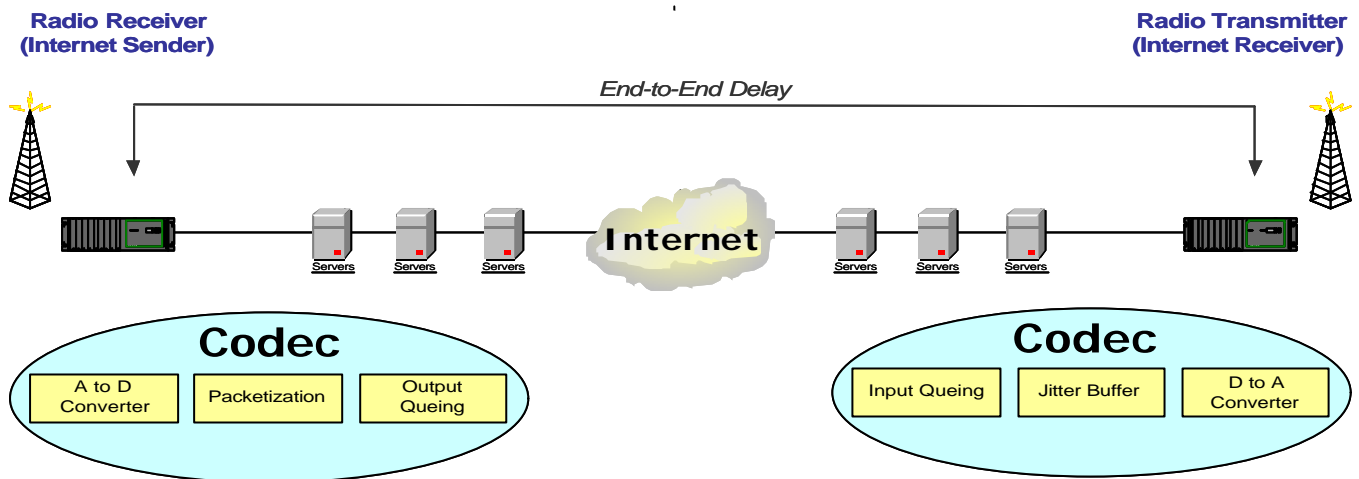

Due to the instability and the lack of security that IPhone and early windows offered, a system called IRLP (Internet Radio Linking Project), was developed by David Cameron, VE7LTD

IRLP unlike previous systems was designed to be more secure and stable principally by running under Linux and preventing direct access to linked systems from the Internet, so the only way to access IRLP is via a connected radio gateway (node). These connections are initiated by the end user keying DTMF codes from their radio. Further info may be obtained from www.irlp.net

With the previous flexibility which IPhone offered, together with the security of IRLP, a new system called iLink was developed by Graeme Barnes, M0CSH. This offering a Windows based alternative to IRLP, with the added feature of direct connections from the Internet.

The strength and support of iLink grew but ultimately suffered from being an unfriendly DOS based program.

With Windows being used more and more daily, together with the introduction of the Windows based EchoLink in May 2002, this DOS application went by the wayside – along with DOS!

Echolink, developed by Jonathan Taylor, K1RFD www.echolink.org has seen a massive increase in users and is by far the most popular software with thousands of hams worldwide.

The advantages of Echolink are many; however, some of the main points are (in no order of priority):

- Worldwide Popularity and support.
- Flexibly in operation for both users and links and repeaters sysops.
- Requirement to register your callsign first before use. Security.
- Ability to allow or disallow individual stations and/or countries if need be.
- Easy to use.
- All in one application for both the home PC user and RF Link or Repeater Sysop.
- Ability to contact stations directly, either singly or multiple connections.
- Automatic Callsign and Connected Station Log.
- Ability to join conferences containing a number of stations – bit like a net.
- Continually updated with features and support which means its always up-to-date
- Flexible DTMF control for RF stations, allowing link control and connections.
- Remote Link/Repeater Multi-Sysop admin/operation if required
- Extensive Link/Repeater functions such as voice announcements etc
- Built in Text Chat Box allowing messages to be typed to other stations.

If this all a bit too much, then another program called eQSO developed in around 2001 by Paul Davies MOZPD is available www.eqso.net. This was released initially to replace the old iPhone conference servers and only has conference room facilities.

eQSO works in a completely different way to the above programs in that it is designed around 'Chat Rooms' where you can join in and either monitor or talk, just like a radio net. This is a great feature.

The 'Virtual Chat Rooms' such as 101ENGLISH contains a number of English speaking RF links/repeaters as well as PC based stations. So any transmission in the 'room' is broadcast to ALL stations in the room, including all links and repeaters. This has pro's and con's and as such is not the preferred software for many repeater keepers and sysops.

Multiple rooms are available for different languages and uses. This includes rooms for private nets, blind operators and special event stations. Some rooms thus having RF connected stations and some only having PC based stations, or a mix of the two.

One of the greatest concerns with eQSO is that it currently requires no authorization to use it, although on the plus side it does allow for SWL's to monitor. However, this can also be a grey area as non licensed stations or hams can talk or provide possible misuse.

If you have not tried EchoLink or eQSO, I would recommend you download both and have a go!

Conclusion

I'm unsure what Tony Hancock would have made of it but one thing is for sure, Internet Gateway Linking is here to stay and is responsible for a great deal of rekindled (and welcomed), Ham interest. The Gateway has even spread to PMR446 (Licence Free), operation! www.446user.co.uk, complete with links across the UK and other countries.

Dick put the magazine to one side with a smile of enthusiasm then proceeded to tidy his service bench in readiness for the next electronic casualty which a customer brought in earlier that morning....

Till the next time!
